WELCOME

We are incredibly excited to welcome all the delegates, speakers and special guests to the inaugural ASEAN Australia Young Leaders Forum. The ASEAN-Australia Young Leaders Forum was born from the belief that connecting young people through a regional network and empowering them with a deep understanding of ASEAN and Australia relations will advance the relationship into the future. Seeing it all come together has been equally invigorating and humbling.

The Forum has been enabled by the ASEAN-Australia Strategic Youth Partnership (AASYP). AASYP is a youth-led initiative to drive dialogue, partnership and innovation between young people aged 18-29 years from across ASEAN and Australia. We envision a generation of influential young leaders equipped with the skills and knowledge to engage with each other and the most pressing issues facing the region. To the whole AASYP team, this Forum is for you!

An event of this size does not come together without our partners. We are deeply grateful for our partners who have relentlessly supported the Forum’s vision. Thank you to the Australia ASEAN Council, Australia Mission to ASEAN and Australia Now for always being willing to pick up the phone and help us out. Thank you to our respective universities, The Australian National University and the University of Western Australia, for your continued commitment to the study of Asia and encouraging youth leadership in the region. Thank you to Tokopedia for giving us a home in Jakarta, and for being incredibly helpful every step of the way. Finally, thank you to Asialink for providing expertise not only to our team, but our delegates. Without our partners, this would not have been possible.

We are very excited to welcome our inaugural delegates. Each of the delegates has a unique story to tell, and we are very excited to see them apply their expertise to the various challenges that afflict our region.

We hope you derive value from the panel discussions, workshops and site visits we have put together. We also hope that the Hackathon provides an environment to build projects for the future of ASEAN-Australia relations.
H.E. AMBASSADOR JANE DUKE

Through the Australia-ASEAN Council as part of the Australia Now ASEAN program, the Australian Mission to ASEAN is pleased to support the inaugural ASEAN-Australia Young Leaders Forum (AAYLF).

ASEAN sits at the heart of the Indo-Pacific region, geographically, diplomatically, strategically and economically. It is a region of significant economic potential, and taken together one of Australia’s largest trading partners.

2019 marks 45 years of Australia’s relations with ASEAN and over that time our relationship has grown into the vital strategic partnership it is today. Understanding how ASEAN and Australia can work together to address challenges and harness opportunities as our region undergoes significant strategic and economic change has never been more important.

The AAYLF is an excellent student-led initiative to deepen ties between ASEAN and Australian youth. Bringing over 40 outstanding young leaders from across the region together for an exciting program of speaker panels, cultural activities and skills development workshops, the AAYLF will help our future leaders understand our region, foster intercultural understanding, and build important networks for the future of the ASEAN-Australia Partnership.

I congratulate all delegates on their participation in this exciting event and I look forward to engaging in the forum’s discussions and to supporting our future generation of leaders to build friendships across the region.

TOKOPEDIA

The challenges our region is currently facing cannot be responded to or solved by a one-size-fits-all solution. We need leaders who can comprehend and understand these changes and can respond in an adaptable, thoughtful and inclusive way.

In particular, we need to elevate young leaders. More than half of the people in Southeast Asia are under the age of 30. Whilst this can be perceived as a challenge, this is also a strength. Young people are dynamic, and understand the existential challenges that lie ahead. They are fearless and always ready to respond.

Tokopedia is proud to support the ASEAN-Australia Young Leaders Forum as a Major Partner. Understanding the value of investing in young people, we believe this forum will be an important opportunity to build leadership capabilities for the future of the region. We hope that you can learn something from us, and we, too, cannot wait to learn from you.

Enjoy the forum, and embrace this opportunity.
Southeast Asia is a strategic geopolitical, economic, and demographic focal point. ASEAN, as the peak regional organisation for Southeast Asia, is emerging as a global convenor and trusted facilitator. On a wide range of issues, we see global actors working with ASEAN to solve pressing regional and extra-regional challenges. Australia has been a long-term partner of ASEAN, and recognises the institution’s importance to Australia and the region.

Since its founding in 1946, The Australian National University (ANU) has been committed to understanding and engaging with Asia and the Pacific. As Australia's national university, ANU maintains world-leading expertise of Australia's region, and devotes its attention to the complex and evolving challenges confronting Australia, its neighbours, and the world. ANU is home to the largest community of academic specialists on Southeast Asia in the world, outside Southeast Asia itself. It plays a vital role in informing public policy and Australia's intellectual engagement on the politics, languages, society, economics and cultures of the region. ANU has trained several generations of Australian diplomats working in Asia, it has trained ministers in many Southeast Asian governments, its researchers have provided expert advice to administrations in both Southeast Asia and Australia and have been engaged with community groups of many kinds.

To underscore its commitment to the region, the University established the ANU Southeast Asia Liaison Office in Singapore in 2018. The Office interlinks research and academic partnerships, alumni and community engagement, and philanthropy - with the aim of facilitating the development of research and education partnerships in the region. This Office brings Australia’s national university even closer to region.

The Australian National University is proud to be a major partner of the ASEAN-Australia Young Leaders Forum. Initiatives like the Forum play an incredibly important role, not only in engaging young people now, but in fostering a new frontier of leadership. The impressive program, which has been put together by the ASEAN Australia Strategic Youth Partnership will empower delegates to have deep conversations about regional problems, and to design collaborative solutions. We look forward to the lively discussions, and engagement through this Forum.
The rationale for the AAYLF is a compelling one: to develop genuine strategic capacity among young, future leaders in Australia and ASEAN countries so as to better tackle emerging societal problems. The credentials of delegates taking part stands on a pressing need to learn about, and become embedded in, the issues of the region. In addition, the Forum marks a maturing in relations across ASEAN and Australia.

Members of the inaugural Forum will rapidly absorb and interpret knowledge and experience from key speakers drawn from policymaking, business, academic, non-profit and cultural sectors. The program has been skilfully designed to allow young leaders to interrogate today’s conventional wisdoms and start sketching a picture of how ASEAN countries and Australia are likely to develop in the next decade. The Forum has amassed a first rate team of delegates, demonstrating real appetite for sharing knowledge and insights across the region.

The UWA Public Policy Institute is proud to support this exciting new initiative and looks forward to developing and working with new cohorts of astute, well-informed young leaders.

Few Australians appreciate the importance of ASEAN to Australia’s future security and prosperity. With the third largest population in the Indo-Pacific after China and India, the ASEAN community is diverse, fast-growing, young, digitally savvy and in our immediate neighbourhood. We have great assets to build on in our relationship with ASEAN. Australia was ASEAN’s first dialogue partner and, with the ASEAN Special Summit in 2018, the relationship has gone from strength to strength. While our economic engagement is solid, there is still more we can do to drive reciprocal investment and digital cooperation.

The ASEAN-Australia Young Leaders Forum is a great opportunity for each of you to deepen your knowledge of the region and create new and vibrant relationships. Our next generation has a key role to play in ASEAN-Australia relations going forward. Stewarding the future of the relationship is a huge and important task – which now falls to you.

Congratulations on your participation in the ASEAN-Australia Strategic Youth Partnership. Make the most of this opportunity – our future depends on it.
